THE FIRST & BEST POSTAL DIPLOMACY RATING SYSTEM DEvised!

A Letter From The Front: Part III:

Wiges, Germany Feb. 23, 1919

We all hated this valley for nearly every night the Germans would get some of us, as we would go thru to work. It was a cool night and just before daylight some of the boys got to working. A German Airplane spotted us and the first thing we knew a couple of shells landed among us killing two officers and also wounded one. Besides several were killed and a lot more wounded.

I had my arm hurt in several places by pieces of shells but was not hurt. As day light the Barrage started and so afterward we started over. Our job was to dig four strong points and wire them so the doughboys could fall back to them for their front line. The Germans had about as much artillery here as we did and they shure made it hot for us.

A nine inch shell lit in the trench between a doughboy and I but failed to explode. This was the nearest I ever came to getting mine from a shell.

We got back to death valley at noon and that PM we lay in trenches there while the Germans shure shot the shells over so that we were forced with the rest of the company which had come out to go to the support of the doughboys for the Germans were putting over heavy counter attacks.

We reached the front line all right but lost three men killed and several wounded getting into position. Some places there was a trench about a foot deep and some places there was none. We got busy as soon as we could getting a little better trench and keeping an eye open for attacks.

The Dutch tried several surprise parties that night but we were ready and they fell back. The next day passed with some long range sniping but we had fine shots then and got the best of it.

That P.M. they put over a counter attack but our Artillery cut them up so that but few reached our lines only to be picked off by the rifle. For two days and almost three nights we helped them hold their line and on the third night we went back to the old front line where we lay in reserve the next day and going back to camp that night.

Take it from me we shure were tired as we were over eighty hours without sleep, grub, and very little water. We got into camp about nine O'clock that night and after a warm meal we hit the pup-tents for a good sleep. (Cont. next issue.)
